Not illustrated. 1888 Excerpt: .influences of the Great Lakes westward of eastern New York and thence to Wisconsin and Minnesota, modified as such influences are by the direction of prevailing winds, that a climatic division of this region upon parallels of latitude become impracticable. In central and western New York, and equally in the lower peninsula of Michigan, these influences are so far equivalent to the oceanic influences which modify the climate of southern and eastern New England, that their pomology is practically identical, and may therefore be considered as mainly without the scope of the subject under consideration. (3) The Wisconsin lake district includes a comparatively limited region in Wisconsin, lying along the western shore of Lake Michigan, which derives a very perceptible climatic advantage from such proximity, which would doubtless be fully the equivalent of that realized upon the eastern shore, but for the fact that the prevailing winds of that region are westerly, bringing an increased tendency to drought and to paroxysms of cold in winter which reach the region without the mellowing influences of the open waters of Lake Michigan; thus creating a climate intermediate between that of the Upper Mississippi Valley and that of the lake region proper. (4) The Lake Superior district, including the upper peninsula of Michigan, together with a strip of northern Wisconsin along the south shore of Lake Superior. Although extending northward beyond the parallel of 47, this district is yet so favorably affected in climate by the surrounding lakes, that...
